I knew Kirk from him coming into my work in Hanover. The first time I saw him walking across the parking lot, I had to do a double take because I thought it was my dad. Once he came up to check out, I told him about my dad. He just smiled. His next visit, I showed him a picture of my dad, in almost identical outfit he was wearing that day, he said he could see why I said that. He then told me he was a triplet. Every visit after that, he always was asking me how I was and how my kids were. Just from knowing him that little bit of time, I know he was a caring and thoughtful man. I am so sorry for your loss, Heaven has received another sweet angel! I know I will certainly miss our little chats and finding out what he is going to be cooking up next.
